Learner support services are the most vital component of any open and distance learning (ODL) system. It includes wide range of academic and other related activities. Monitoring of the support services has to be a continuous and ongoing exercise, which could bring constant improvement through innovations in the support services. ICT facilities and equipment at the study centres, mode of service delivery and monitoring mechanism to ensure effective student support services. The dominant feature of distance education is the physical and often temporal distance that separates the teacher and learner. Because distance students are often placed in a unique situation in which neither teachers nor fellow students are physically present to clarify, discuss, or provide feedback, effective distance education requires a sound learner support system. One important means of analyzing the effectiveness of the teaching-learning experience in a distance education system is through the analysis of the learner support system. "Support systems contribute to the 'process' of a course as do the learning materials" and support systems developed in recognition of student needs help the distance learner become competent and self-confident in learning, social interactions and self-evaluation observes that the effectiveness of the student support system of open/distance learning has not been adequately evaluated. There are some systems or procedures that are purposefully created and effectively utilized by a distance education institution to support and/or facilitate teaching and learning at a distance. They may include any or all of these: Record keeping and administration, pre-admission counseling Admission and registration information-administrative assistance Books dispatched by mail, library service Tutoring and counseling Weekend courses and study centers, Electronic communication technologies such as phones, radio, audio tapes, video, television, etc. With the advent of technology, the list keeps on growing as new innovations are made by the day, especially in the developed world
