Academic Counselling: It encompasses all types of teacher-learner interaction that are aimed at facilitating learning. Such interaction may mainly be tutorial in nature with various aspects of counselling featuring in between. However, sometimes interaction may exclusively be in the nature of counselling. Such counselling may be at

(i) the pre-enrolment or pre-entry stage,
(ii) the stage of induction into a programme,
(iii) the stage of submitting the first assignment,
(iv) the stage of initiation into any new activity such as a lab-course, a hands-on experience in a computer programme, preparation of a project proposal, etc.,
(v) the pre-exam stage, and
(vi) the post-programme stage.

While tutorial interaction is subject-centred (centring around presentation, exposition, explanation, illustration, demonstration, and other pedagogical activities related to the course content), counselling is learner-centred seeking to help learners identify their individual problems, the causes being such problems and the means and ways of overcoming or circumventing such problems so as to enhance the possibilities of effective learning.

Academic counselling may be provided in face-to-face situations through tutor’s comments on assignment-responses, through correspondence or over telephone, where possible.

Academic Counsellors: Academic counsellors are mediators between the learners and the University. They are expected to offer support to the students through counselling and tutorial services. In addition they evaluate the learner’s assignment responses and may provide feedback to the learner through tutor comments. In some cases assignment responses may be evaluated by academics who are not engaged in counselling.

At VMOU, besides being used as a means of didactic communication, it is used as instrument of continuous sources. At VMOU a certificate is worth 12-18 credits (i.e. 360-540 study hours), which can be completed in a full time equivalent of a an academic half year. Maximum calendar time to complete a Certificate Programme is 2 years.

Counselling: It constitute three components, viz. informing, advising and counselling, where informing means giving appropriate and correct information about courses of studies advising covers suggesting appropriate courses of action and counselling means helping the learners to clarify their needs, feelings, etc. so that they can make appropriate decisions for themselves.

Curriculum: The word curriculum has been derived from the Latin verb “currer” meaning “to run”. From this follows an extension of the meaning to a course to be run and as a metaphor “an educational course to be taught/learned”. In this sense, it is virtually synonymous with the term “syllabus” as is developed by expert committees or Boards of Studies of a university. In its broader sense the word “curriculum”, includes teaching strategies, learning, activities and evaluative devices in relation to a particular syllabus. In the context of distance education, curriculum implies syllabi, multimedia course packages, self-learning processes of the student, and student support services.

Certificate: A document given by VMOU that certifies that a person has received specific education and has received a standard of knowledge of a subject.

Sessions (planned and scheduled in advance) are held in study centres on weekends to facilitate interaction among students guided by academic counsellors. These sessions are used to provide clarification of queries from students, peer group interaction, and the use of audio and video materials.

Distance Learner: Distance learners are those who get enrolled in a distance teaching institution, study independently at a distance with the help of specially designed self-instructional materials. A successful distance learner fulfils the study requirements such as submission of assignment-responses within a time-frame, (where necessary), attendance at contact programmes (where necessary), etc. and clears the examination. It should be noted that these requirements are to be fulfilled for credit courses only.

Entrance Examination: Applicants to certain programmes of open universities are required to take an entrance examination or to fill a self-appraisal performa. Their admission to a programme is decided by the open university on the basis of their performance in the entrance examination or on the basis of the assessment of the details in their self-appraisals as the case may be.

Feedback: It is the process of asking response from participant about a system, process, or activity so as to improve or take corrective action, if needed. In distance education it usually refers to the comments of the tutor on assignments submitted by the students.

Intensive Counselling: In the process of intensive counselling the number of hours prescribed for counseling for a course/programme is not spread over the entire academic year. Instead, it is completed in a short period of time, say a working week, by putting in long hours of work each day, i.e. through workshops, practicals, etc.

Manuscript: This is the handwritten or typed text submitted to go through the process of print material production.

Monitoring: It refers to activities performed by Regional Centres to check the regularity, adequacy and effectiveness of counselling sessions arranged for various programmes at the study centres. Regional Centres: Regional Centres (RCs) are Open University establishments, representing the open university, in select places. Their functions are to liaise between the university on the one hand and the students, study centres, the public, the local educational institutions etc. on the other. The RCs establish, maintain and monitor the services offered through the study centres, besides assisting the university in the process of publicity, admission, course delivery and examination.

Regional Services: Besides tutorials and counselling, it includes many more services such as information services (enquiry), establishment and maintenance of Regional Centres and/or study centres to help learners get over their difficulties and complete the courses of their choice successfully.

Self-Instructional Materials: These are the basic and essential components of a distance education system which enable learners to develop knowledge, skills and attitudes in specific areas of study according to their own pace and time. These are specially designed to impart measurable educational outcomes keeping in mind the target group of learners.
Study Centres: Study Centres (SCs) are locations where most of the face-to-face interaction between teachers (tutors/academic counsellors) and learners of an open university takes place. Apart from organizing the face-to-face sessions, SCs provide library, audio-video and classroom support, besides the necessary information services to the learners and to the public as and when required.
